

THE CENTRAL RECORD.

THIRTY THIRD YEAR

LANCASTER, KY., THURSDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 21, 1922.

NUMBER 24.

OLD DIRECTORS OF ASSOCIATION ARE ELECTED

Burley Tobacco Co-operative Association Name Directors in 22 Districts at Conventions Saturday

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 18.—Conventions of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, held today in each of the twenty-two districts into which the territory producing burley tobacco has been divided for purposes of representation of the growers on the board resulted in the return of the sitting members. In most cases there was no opposition to the re-election.

The directors elected today will choose three directors-at-large at the first meeting of the new board October 4th. The present directors-at-large are Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, for Kentucky; Martin L. Harris, of Rising Sun, for Indiana, and Charles H. Woodmansee, of Felicity, for Ohio. West Virginia sent Hon. Elliott Northcott, United States District Attorney for the southern district of that state, as its representative on the board. Tennessee is not represented this year, as it did not deliver any tobacco last year and the basis of representation in the election of directors is the tobacco delivered the previous year.

Members of the new board elected today are:

- First—James C. Stone, Lexington.
- Second—Samuel Clay, Paris.
- Third—Clifford L. Walters, Shelbyville.
- Fourth—Jas. H. Kehoe, Maysville.
- Fifth—Frank V. Nunneley, of Georgetown.
- Sixth—O. C. Ellis, Ripley, Ohio.
- Seventh—Everett McClure, Aurora, Indiana.
- Eighth—John B. Winn, Versailles.
- Ninth—P. B. Gaines, Carrollton.
- Tenth—K. Bourne, New Castle.
- Eleventh—Dawson Chambers, Walton, R. F. D.
- Twelfth—Rev. J. R. Jones, Cynthia.
- Thirteenth—Carroll D. Asbury, Augusta.
- Fourteenth—Ben T. Wright, Mt. Sterling.
- Fifteenth—J. H. Souley, Flemingsburg.
- Sixteenth—William H. Shanks, Stanford.
- Seventeenth—Bush W. Allin, Harrodsburg.
- Eighteenth—Judge I. H. Thurman, Springfield.
- Nineteenth—R. P. Taylor, Winchester.
- Twentieth—E. T. Holloway, Taylorsville.
- Twenty-first—J. D. Craddock, Munfordsville.
- Twenty-second—Hon. Elliott Northcott, Huntington, W. Va.

Baptist Church News

Our special services are still in progress with increasing interest and attendance. At the morning services Brother Martin has brought some rich expositions of scripture from the Book of Philippians and other passages, with consequent blessings and broadening of vision to church members and other Christians attending the services.

Dr. Martin is distinctively a pastor-evangelist, and his messages from night to night have dealt with the fundamental facts of sin, and the need and plan of salvation, but there has also been the emphasis upon the need of having a strong vigorous church life, which comes from wholehearted, consecration to God and the business of His kingdom.

Owing to pastoral duties at home Brother Martin will be obliged to close his work with us on Friday evening of this week.

There will be afternoon services at the church Thursday and Friday. Come with a generous thank-offering on Friday evening.

The services next Sunday will be at the usual hours, with preaching by the pastor morning and evening.

Let all the members continue their splendid co-operation by attending the regular services next Sunday. An invitation is also extended to all to join with us in service and worship.

ELI ESTRIDGE

Another Old Soldier Answers
Final Roll Call

After a lingering illness of four and one-half months, Mr. Eli Estridge passed peacefully away at his home at Paint Lick, on Monday evening at 5:30 o'clock.

Mr. Estridge was born April 10th., 1840, and died September 18, 1922. Age 82 years, 5 months and 8 days.

He was married to Rebecca Lewis in 1861. To this union there were born seven children. He is survived by his wife, Rebecca Estridge, one son, Felix and two daughters, Mrs. Vina McWhorter and Mrs. M. K. Ross of Paint Lick; twenty-three grandchildren, ten great grandchildren, also one sister, Mrs. Sam Fennington, of Harrison, Ohio, four children having preceded him, Martha and Mary dying in infancy, and John L. Estridge, who died several years ago, and the late A. B. Estridge, of Paint Lick.

He enlisted in the service of his country as a Union soldier in 1863, and served until the close of war. He fought in several hard battles, including the battle of Lookout Mountain. Was wounded in a skirmish near Cynthia, Ky.

He was a member of the Baptist church for about fifty-five years.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Wednesday, at ten A. M., by his pastor, Rev. Willie Rogers, assisted by Rev. F. P. Bryant, after which interment took place in the Lancaster cemetery.

Hogan

Mrs. W. J. Hogan, of Bryantsville, who was taken ill Sunday evening after returning from church, was stricken with paralysis about two o'clock Monday morning and passed into the Great Beyond at two o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Hogan was in her 79th year and had been feeble in body for some time, but in the past month or so, had rallied and attended the church services, taking an active interest in all about her, and especially the construction of the wall and walks leading up to the newly built church.

She was born near Stanford, being one of the large family of Hamilton and Eliza Wooley Baughman, and is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Martha Phillips, of Stanford and Mrs. Nancy Bruce, of Dearborn, Mo.

In early girlhood she was united in marriage to Capt. W. J. Hogan, who preceded her to the grave fourteen years ago. To this union was born three daughters, Mrs. W. T. Wolf, Mrs. E. H. Ballard and Lee Hogan, who died in early girlhood. Besides the two daughters two granddaughters and two grandsons are left to mourn her loss, Miss Mayme Ballard, Hogan and Bryan Ballard, of Bryantsville and Miss Margaret Wolf, of Lexington.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church by her pastor, Rev. A. P. Jones, assisted by Rev. Clark, of Wilmore. Interment taking place in the Lancaster cemetery, where a large concourse of friends and relatives had gathered with many beautiful floral offerings to pay tribute to a noble and worthy character.

It seemed fitting that "Granny Hogan" as she was lovingly called by every man, woman and child in the community, was called to her heavenly home almost from the portals of the church she loved so well.

For over half a century she and her husband bore the burden of the church and religious work of the community. Her every interest was centered in the welfare of the church. Truly for the church, "her tears did fall—her prayers ascended, and her toils and cares were given—'til toils and cares did end."

Her home was always open to Ministers of God and a Haven of Rest to any who were weary and needed her wise counsel and comforting words. The writer of this feeble effort will sadly miss her cheerful face, her motherly care and loving kindness. And to the family we would comfort you with the words of triumph that "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—from henceforth ye, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors."

"School Days"

Movie lovers have a treat in store for them at the Roman Opera House, next Thursday and Friday night, September 28th. and 29th., when Wesley Barry, better known as "Freckles" will appear on the screen in "School Days." It's the funniest one ever, and Wesley himself says: "Don't blame me if you get a belyake from laffen."

JERSEY CALF

To be Given Away at The Bryantsville Community

Fair

A fine registered Jersey Bull calf will be given away by the promoters of the Bryantsville Community Fair on September 23rd.

All boys of Garrard county between the ages of 10 and 16 years of age will be permitted to draw for the calf.

The conditions of the drawing will be that whoever gets the calf must agree to keep it until 15 months of age, and to raise it so far as possible under the directions which will be forwarded by the Dairy Department of the Agricultural College. Second, that the parents of the boy to consent to him keeping it.

The calf was donated by G. B. Swinebroad, and is from one of the best cows of his herd of Registered Jerseys.

Lancaster Hi Wins

First Game of Season

The Lancaster High School Foot Ball team won the first game of the season here last Friday when they in a one-sided contest and loosely played game defeated the Junction City High by the score of 42 to 0.

Captain Cox and his string of Foot Ball warriors were not near up to standard and had the visitors had any kind of a team they could have easily defeated the local Hi, as the lads representing the Lancaster schools played a slow and saggy game from start to finish. They had very little "pep" and fumbles were quite frequent.

Coaches McRoberts and Wilmut are working hard this week, putting the finishing touches on their men and are confident of victory on tomorrow (Friday), over the Nicholasville High School. It will be remembered by the many Lancastrians that Nicholasville stole a march on the Green and White string men last season and defeated them by a few points, however, the boys are taking special training this week in order that they may and will take the scalp of the visitors tomorrow.

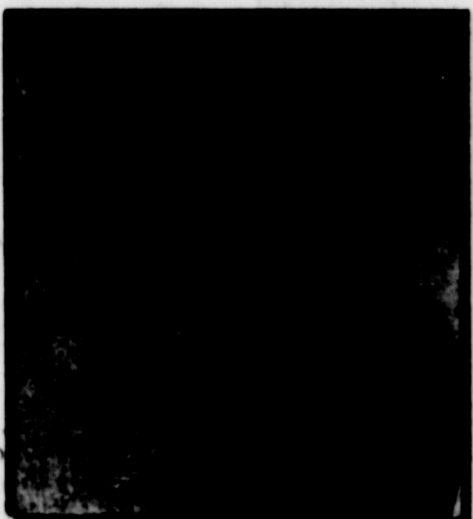

Captain Cox played his entire string of men last Friday and they all showed up very well under fire, and by this week-end the Coaches hope to have the finishing touches on their squad.

Mrs. Carrie Davidson's division of the C. W. B. M., wishes to reserve the day before Thanksgiving for an exchange.

NEW METHODIST MINISTER

Being Warmly Greeted in Lancaster

Pleased With New Home

Rev. H. W. Whitaker

The above is a very good likeness of the new pastor of the Methodist church, who together with his wife and two children, Evelyn and Howard, Jr., have recently moved into our midst, to take up their official duties with the local church.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitaker are being warmly greeted by the people of Lancaster, irrespective of church affiliations, and already have made many warm personal friends among our citizens.

Mr. Whitaker has been pastor at Walton and Erlanger, Ky., in the Covington District for four years and had been asked to return for the fifth, but the recent Conference thought otherwise, and Lancaster and Garrard county are the gainers thereby.

One of the churches which Rev. Whitaker has had charge of, has seen the result of his ministry grow by leaps and bounds and under his ministry the membership was doubled, growing both spiritually and progressing along temporal matters in all lines. In the Walton church he was

Palmer

After an illness of three months, the last eight weeks of which was spent in the St. Joseph Hospital at Lexington, George W. Palmer, aged 53 years, died in that institution last Sunday night at 11:30 o'clock, of cancer of the liver.

George Palmer was one of the best known young men in Lancaster, having been associated in different lines of business in the city for the past twenty-five years. He leaves many warm personal friends who will be made sad to know that he is no more. Stricken with the fatal disease several months ago, he fought gamely to the end and all that the best surgical and medical skill could do, was of no avail. He comes of one of the largest and most prominently connected families in the county and leaves three brothers, William, Robert and Lee Palmer and six sisters, Mrs. Eliza Traylor, of Stanford, Mrs. Lizzie Johnson, of Danville, Mrs. Emma Higginbotham, Mrs. Anna West, of Lancaster; Mrs. Kitty Hines, of Nebraska and Mrs. Maggie Burke, of Asheville, N. C.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family in the loss of a devoted and affectionate brother. The devotion of one widowed sister, who will probably feel his loss most keenly, was very beautiful indeed, she having remained by his bedside during his entire illness at the hospital, and who often sought his council about financial matters and gave in return much spiritual advice to the deceased.

Mr. Palmer was a member of the Christian church and affiliated with the Fair View church on the Richmond pike. His remains were brought from Lexington last Monday morning and taken to the home of his brother, Robert Palmer, where funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon by Rev. E. B. Bourland, interment following in the Lancaster cemetery.

Bumper 'Taters

John Forbes, who just naturally raises things a little bigger and better than anyone we know of, brought to this office six Irish potatoes that weigh 7½ pounds. They are beauties, and can be seen in our window.

Sorry to Lose Them

We regret to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Brown are soon to leave us and return to their old home, Stanford, where Mr. Brown has purchased an interest with Carroll Bailey in the gents furnishing business. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have made many warm and sincere friends since moving to Lancaster and their near departure is a genuine regret.

HENLEY BASTIN'S

Efficiency as Superintendent of Frankfort Penitentiary

Highly Praised

Friends in his "old home town" are highly pleased to hear of the nice things said of Henley V. Bastin, in connection with his work as superintendent of the State penitentiary. Those who know this splendid gentleman, predicted from the time of his appointment, that he would make good, and even those who criticized the selection as a possible political one, are now praising his work under the merit system, and moves the Louisville Evening Post to say:

"From time to time news comes down from Frankfort of the excellent work that is being done at the State penitentiary by Mr. Bastin, the present superintendent of that institution. In regard to the excellence of Mr. Bastin's work there seem to be no two opinions. He is certainly one of the most capable men in the employment of our State. He manages that penitentiary according to the merit system, and he manages it well."

There is an interesting story in connection with Mr. Bastin's appointment. His home is, we believe, in Lancaster, and when he was appointed superintendent at Frankfort he was a member of the Republican State Central Committee. The Post, among others, noted the fact when he was appointed, and questioned the wisdom of such an appointment by a bi-partisan board.

But the appointment has worked out all right. Mr. Bastin put political activity behind him when he took this place, and the Post has heard his work praised as freely by Democrats as by Republicans. He has made such an excellent record that his services must not be lost to the State, and the incident is important as demonstrating that a man may be a politician, and an earnest one, during a time when it is all right for him to be a politician, and a zealous public officer, uninfluenced by politics, when he accepts such employment. It by no means always works this way. On the other hand it usually works the other way. Once a professional politician always a professional politician, some will say. Mr. Bastin's case shows there are exceptions to all rules."

Goes to Havana

Secretary G. A. Abbott, who resigned from the Chamber of Commerce here several weeks ago, has accepted a position as secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Havana, Cuba, and will sail from New York on October 5th. Friends of Mr. Abbott will be glad to know that he has been tendered and accepted so lucrative a position, paying almost double the amount received here, with his traveling expenses paid.

Mrs. Abbott and son, Dan, will remain in Lancaster for several weeks until permanent arrangements can be made for them in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Abbott have made many warm friends since coming to Lancaster, who will regret their departure, but wish them every success in their new field of work.

Community Fair

Everything is in readiness for the Bryantsville Community Fair, which will be held Saturday at the Bryantsville school building.

Indications point in every way to a successful exhibition and many entries have been sent in already, by which one would judge that all classes will be well filled.

Quite a number from Lancaster expect to attend this fair and it is hoped that the attendance from here will be large, for a day of pleasure, as well as profit is in store for those who see it.

First Game of Season

Many from Lancaster and Garrard county expect to attend the first foot ball game of the season at Danville Saturday afternoon, when Centre College will be opposed by Carson Newman College of Tennessee.

The Centre Colonels have been training hard during the past week and are ready now to meet all comers. Work on the new stands are being rapidly completed, at which time about 4,000 people can be seated.

Pie Supper

There will be a pie supper at Pleasant Hill school house Saturday evening, Sept. 30th., at 7:30 o'clock.

Funds will go to help buy an organ for the Pleasant Hill church. Everybody is invited.

BASCOM FORD

Passes Suddenly into the Great Beyond

The news of the sudden death of Bascom C. Ford last Friday morning brought genuine sorrow to friends and relatives in Lancaster and throughout the county. He passed suddenly away at Fort Thomas, where he had been an invalid for several months; his sudden death being caused by heart trouble and clot on the brain. Last February he was stricken with a hemorrhage of the brain and for several weeks life was in a balance. He recovered sufficiently to return to his home here for a few weeks and was later taken to a hospital at Ft. Thomas, where he was when the end came suddenly Friday morning about ten o'clock.

The remains were brought to Lancaster Saturday night and taken to the home of his brother, Lige Ford. Funeral services were held at the Lancaster cemetery Sunday afternoon, where one of the largest gathering of friends, ever seen in the Lancaster cemetery, had assembled to pay their last respects to one of Garrard county's most popular young men. The deceased was the oldest son of the late Judge and Mrs. A. D. Ford and was 34 years of age. He was a devout member of the Methodist church. He is survived by one brother, Lige Ford, of this city and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Ford Estes, of Cincinnati.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. W. Whitaker, of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. H. S. Hudson.

It is sad, indeed, to see one so well equipped for life, taken so suddenly, yet for him there was no standing on the border land, gazing into the unknown, for death came as the sunset dies along the hills when the day is over.

"But now he sleeps where the daisies nod."

And the clover hangs its head,
Where the wild birds come and the wild bees hum,

Above his lonely bed.

He fought the fight, he kept the faith,
His fame shines bright and clear,
And his memory lives in all our hearts
Which will hold it ever dear."

Rankin

Mr. James C. Rankin died last Sunday morning at 3:30 o'clock at his late home on the Danville and Hubbe pike, after a lingering illness of tuberculosis. He was sixty-five years of age and a native of Wayne county and was one of Lincoln county's best and most substantial citizens.

He leaves a number of relatives in Garrard, Boyle and Lincoln county, and will be greatly missed. He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. F. F. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. D. L. Spoonamore, of the Hubbe section of Lincoln county.

The deceased was a son of David Rankin and James Gillispie Rankin, of Wayne county. Funeral services were held at the late residence last Tuesday morning, interment following in the Danville cemetery.

Jury Money

Uncle Dave Ross, who is trustee of the jury fund, informs us that the jury money is ready for those who served during the August term of the Garrard Circuit Court.

There will be an ice cream supper at Buckeye school house, Saturday night, at seven o'clock. Admission, 5, 10 and 15cts. There will also be an entertainment before supper. Admission to entertainment 10cts.

A "Palmer School"

Graduate Chiropractor

Any doubt might be in your mind concerning Chiropractic would be banished if you were to visit the mother school of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa.

Thousands of patients visit the great clinic at the Palmer School every year. Students at the school receive a thorough education in anatomy, chemistry, symptomatology, toxicology, physiology, hygiene, and the philosophy of Chiropractic and are expected to give many hundreds of adjustments before graduation.

With this vast preliminary education it is not surprising that P. S. C. Chiropractors are achieving remarkable results.

National Convention
New Orleans, October 16th. to 20th.

Tanks, big guns and other materials of warfare will be exhibited by the United States War Department during the American Legion natoinal convention in New Orleans, October 16th. to 20th., convention headquarters has been advised by Major General C. C. Williams, chief of ordnance of the United States army.

Ten carloads of ordnance virtually everything in the way of war materials, from hand grenades to 155-millimeter guns, will comprise the exhibit. The ordnance, which will be brought on flat cars, will be on display in a prominent site near convention hall. Daily maneuvers, in which all the latest tactics of warfare will be demonstrated, are scheduled during the five convention days.

The larger guns, three 75 millimeter and three 155 millimeter pieces, will be drawn by trucks in the convention parade. There will also be a horse-drawn section of artillery, composed of 75 millimeter French field guns. Other objects of interest will be a 6-ton tank, a camouflaged ammunition wagon and numerous tractors.

The exhibit will be held under the direction of a number of ordnance officers sent from the government arsenal at Rock Island.

What Do You Think?

When you put your thinking cap on after the evening meal, what is the trend of your thoughts?

High prices of everything you use.

Business stagnation.
Political corruption.
Grafting prohibition agents.
Boose scandals.
Divorces in high life.
Murders and robberies.

These are a few of the multitudinous thoughts that flit through the average mind, with their long trail of dissatisfaction and disgust.

Try a change of thought for a few evenings—something along these lines.

Is the home life what it should be?

Is the proper amount of care and supervision being exercised over the growing children?

Are the best efforts being put forth for the improvement of conditions in the home community?

Does the proper spirit of amity and unity prevail among the business interests of our town?

Are you a booster of the home town, or are you a critic?

Thoughts often come unbidden, but it is not difficult to divert them to certain lines if one so desires.

Try it for the welfare of those about you.

It may result in greater peace of mind for yourself.

Wise people keep a stiff upper lip. It conceals their false teeth.

This country is full of brains. You can even find a few of them in congress.

There is plenty of wisdom in this world, but too much of it gets into the heads of d. f.'s.

Counterfeiters have invaded Russia, but the ruble is so worthless nobody cares what they do.

Some people are quite justified in thinking there is no such thing as a secret. They spill everything they know.

It would never do to settle all of our strikes and other troubles at once. We would have nothing left to worry about.

It requires thirty-three men to guard the president, but some of our married men insist that one "guard" is quite sufficient.

Arnold

In the passing of Mrs. Margaret Arnold there ended a life of varied experiences, for her life's span covered the greatest history making epoch of all time and right nobly she did her part, in all life's spheres. As a young woman thru the stirring and romantic days of the "sixties." Later as home maker, wife and mother, and when sorrows came. And near to the close of her life, when it seemed God lengthened her three score and ten years, that she, like the Spartan mother of old, might send her loved son to battle for the right "over there."

Born to wealth and social prestige she upheld the traditions of her race in her womanly demeanor.

And like all sensible people; good birth, she knew work was an ennobling thing, and "Looked well to the ways of her household;" until her home was known far and near as a place of gracious hospitality to the outsider and to her children the place where she lovingly reigned and well may they think of her as, "A queen of service, with a crown of silver hair."

Garland of valor and sorrow, Of beauty and renown, Life that honors the brave Crowned her Himself with the crown.

And so her beautiful life ended, they laid her away; even as she had hoped, on an Autumn day like that on which her beloved husband was;

a day of changing lights and shadows and over all the brooding sadness of nature in her tenderest mood; a day so like that other, that time seemed to have stood still, save this that for him there was a guard of honor of his old comrades, but their ranks had grown too thin to do her honor.

And yet the eyes of love could visualize a spirit guard; led by her soldier husband and father; while the stainless, starry banner, long since gone back to God, waved on high and thus "high honor" given to this "laughter" of the loved "cause." And so she rests— "Oh faithful amid the shadows, And true on the highest steep, God sets His seal on your service. Sleep, beloved one, sleep."

House Construction

Gets Attention of Poultrymen

With the dull season of the farm poultry business close at hand, many Kentucky farmers are expected to take advantage of the opportunity to get their hen houses in shape for the winter poultrymen at the College of Agriculture say. The annual fall culling of flocks soon will be finished while many other details connected with the farm flock already have assumed minor importance for this year. In this state, where the climate is subject to sudden changes of temperature, fowls need suitable houses before they can produce the largest number of eggs in winter. The more comfortable a hen is made the greater her egg production is apt to be.

Successful poultrymen now recognize that the poultry house should fulfill at least six main requirements. These are: 1. Plenty of fresh air. 2—Plenty of sunlight. 3—Dryness. 4—Freedom from drafts. 5—Durability. 6—Low cost.

While these are some of the main points to be considered in building or remodeling poultry houses, there are a number of others that should receive attention. Among other things, the nests, roosts and equipment of the house should be so arranged that all of the floor space may be used for scratching.

Placing the house on a good foundation that is constructed to be rat-proof and free from moisture is another important point. Solid concrete walls or posts can be used although wooden posts are used most commonly. Solid concrete foundations and floors are meeting with increased favor among poultrymen. In building the walls, it is important to remember that they should be constructed to prevent drafts, retain heat, prevent the condensation of moisture and have a smooth surface that may be kept free of mites and other vermin. The two most popular styles of roof are the half-monitor and the shed-roof. The former is satisfactory when the house is deeper than 16 feet while the chief advantage of the latter are its ease of construction and economy of material.

Extension Circular No. 107 has been prepared by the college to help farmers and poultrymen with their flock housing problems. It may be obtained free by writing the Experiment Station, Lexington.

The United Junior Chamber of Commerce, whose organization is about 95 per cent ex-service men, will send about 1,500 delegates to an impromptu reunion, to be held during convention week.

AIM TO PORTRAY CLUB PRACTICES

Individual Exhibits of Boys and Girls Eliminated at Eastern States Exposition.

TO EXHIBIT MODEL PADDOCK

Teams From Thirteen States Will Give Daily Demonstrations of Methods Used in Work—Medals and Ribbons Awarded.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Unlike previous years, there will be no individual or competing club group exhibits of members of boys' and girls' agricultural and home economics clubs this year at the Eastern States exposition; instead the exhibits will portray practices used by club members directed co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and state agricultural colleges.

In the space allotted the clubs will be shown exhibits from the farm of Elizabeth Farley, near Amherst, Mass. Miss Farley is a former club member, now connected with club work as a local leader. The exhibit will include dairy cows, sheep, pigs and poultry. The swine will be in a model paddock, with colony house, shade, concrete wallow, self-waterer, self-feeder and creep.

Miss Farley Won Prizes.

Miss Farley began her work as a club member in 1913 at the age of ten, when she raised some asters, exhibited them at the fair, but received no prize. Undaunted she tried for two more years when she won the second prize of $2.50. After that she enlarged her activities to include hens; after the hens she added pigs in 1918. Since winning the second prize on asters, some of her products have taken prizes each year. In 1919 she continued her work raising hens, pigs and a cow, but she withdrew from competition having had six years of club experience. At present she has, as a result of her club work, 23 head of stock, about 80 laying hens, 500 chickens, three horses—one a saddle horse—and three wagons. She has clothed herself for three years and is helping pay for the farm where she now has her stock.

Demonstrate Club Work.

Besides this exhibit, 40 demonstration teams from 13 states will give daily demonstrations of methods used in their club work. The demonstrators are chosen by their respective states on account of their ability in this work. There will be, also, 40 judging teams from the same 13 states, and exhibits of ten lines of club work will be judged. This will give the teams and other club members present the opportunity to see high standard animals, products, and other materials. Experts will give reasons for placing the exhibits judged, which will increase the educational value of this feature. Medals and ribbons will be awarded all teams showing proficiency in judging. If club members wish to exhibit their products they may enter the general contests open to all exhibitors.

A radio outfit installed on the exposition grounds at Camp Vail will make it possible for club members to receive messages.

MORE LIME TO HELP CLOVER

Crop Is Often Hindered by Lack of Material—Other Causes of Poor Stand.

Clover which doesn't come well is in most cases hindered by lack of lime, according to the State Agricultural college at Ithaca. It cites, also, several other causes, among which are winter killing of southern-grown seed, inadequate drainage, and too heavy seeding of the nurse crop.

TOOLS REQUIRED IN GARDEN

With Proper Equipment, Work Among Plants Becomes Pleasure Instead of Drudgery.

Most people regard the garden as a place to hoe and pull weeds during spare hours; a sort of necessary evil. This attitude can usually be traced to inadequate equipment. With proper tools and timely attention, care of the garden becomes a pleasure.

Members of divisional war organizations will have no difficulty in locating their former "buddies" at the American Legion national convention in New Orleans next month, according to the committee on division reunions.

A booth will be established in the Legion home at which members of war organizations only, may register their convention address, home address and the name of the organization to which they belong.

Tuesday, October 17th., will be reunion day and a hall to be used for that purpose will be provided for the various "outfits" that contemplate holding divisional gatherings simultaneously with the national convention.

Two silver loving cups will be awarded as trophies, one to the organization showing the greatest attendance and the other to the "outfit" having the greatest number of men in the Legion parade which will be held Wednesday, October 18th.

The following organizations will hold reunions during the convention: Society of 22nd. Engineers, Society of 22nd. Engineers Light Railway, Evacuation Hospital Number 14, 34th Infantry of the Seventh Division. Invitations have been tendered to the following orders to hold their reunions here: Military Order of the World War, Buckeye Division Association, War Society of the 87th. Division and Clichy Post Air Service Supply Dept. 1.

HESSIAN FLY IS INJURIOUS PEST

Farmers Are Urged to Wait for Local Fly-Free Date Before
Sowing Any Wheat.

HEAVY INFESTATION IN PAST

Great Deal of Crop Needlessly Lost
Last Spring by Those Unwilling to Wait Until Danger Line
Had Been Passed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Wheat growers are urged by the United States Department of Agriculture to observe their local fly-free date for sowing. In every state where there has been heavy infestation by the Hessian fly in the past the state experiment station and the county agents have taken steps to work out a safe date, after which sowing might be started. It was found last spring that a great deal of wheat was needlessly lost by those who were unwilling to wait until fly emergence was over, or who were not converted to the idea of late sowing.

Harvesting Grain With Self-Binder.

To combat the Hessian fly pest where it was prevalent last year the county agents used every possible channel for advertising the fly-free date and for urging that it be strictly observed. In no state was the date earlier than September 24, and in many counties planting was not considered safe till after October 1. The department suggests that similar methods for informing farmers of the safe time to plant may be followed this month.

Active Fly Campaign.

Ohio had an active Hessian fly campaign last fall in 33 counties. Studies were made with emergence cages at the state experimental farm and reports from these were compared with results in local migration boxes. County committees of farmers determined the safe dates for each particular section. Circulars and letters on the subject were distributed as widely as possible. Many county fair exhibits were arranged. In Auglaize county one box represented the wheat up, and was labeled "Sown too early," and the other showed no wheat because it was "sown after safe date." An accompanying label ran, "Hessian fly will leave for new fields in September; which field will it choose?"

Hatched Hessian flies were frequently shown as exhibits, also posters giving the life history of the fly. School teachers received copies of Hessian fly literature to use for the agricultural lesson in September.

Advertised "Wild Bunch."

The Hancock county agent had a display that drew the attention of hundreds of persons to the fly menace. He advertised the "Wild Bunch," the most expensive animal in the state of Ohio, and led the crowds to see a Hessian fly under a watch crystal. Nearby signs described its control.

Paid advertising was frequently resorted to. Individual cards were mailed to every farmer in Auglaize county whose name appeared on the tax list. In Marion county a rubber stamp was made for the county agent's office giving the fly-free date. It was used on every piece of mail that went out. As a result of these various methods of campaigning in Ohio a very small percentage, from two to ten farmers in a county, ignored the fly-free date last fall, so that the outlook this season is improved.

Similar activities were carried on in Kansas, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania. In Labette county, Kansas, all infested wheat was plowed under in the spring and farmers were particularly urged to destroy volunteer wheat that had cropped up during the summer. By far the most satisfactory control of the Hessian fly pest, however, has been achieved by complete co-operation of all farmers in each section, in observing the local fly-free date for sowing wheat.

The $50,000 Operation By HUBERT RAY

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"Breathe away! Breathe away, Mr. Fotheringay."

There was deference even in the voice of the anesthetist, and in the way he deferentially placed the ether cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose, for it was a $50,000 operation, and Mr. Fotheringay was many times a millionaire.

Yes, that was Mr. Fotheringay, that bulk lying unconscious upon the glass-topped table; that bloated bulk of a man, to operate upon whom Professor Openhim had been summoned by special train from Chicago.

The table containing the inanimate form of Professor Openhim's patient was wheeled into the operating theater adjoining. The benches were packed with serious-faced students and many medical men of the city, who had assembled to see something removed from the stomach of Mr. Fotheringay.

Mr. Fotheringay had swallowed a small, hard, round metallic object. So much the X-ray had revealed. There it lay, in Mr. Fotheringay's stomach interfering with the processes of digesting lobster a la Newburg and other viands such as are prepared for men of Mr. Fotheringay's social position.

"How did you come to swallow that?" the surgeon had asked Mr. Fotheringay.

"Must have been biting it," Mr. Fotheringay responded.

The white-robed nurses were grouped in a solid phalanx about the operating table. At least half a dozen of Professor Openhim's assistants were present to assist. One had to hold the forceps, another inserted sponges in the wound that was to be inflicted upon Mr. Fotheringay. Others were simply there to lend prestige to Professor Openhim and to dignify the day—for it was a $50,000 operation.

Mr. Fotheringay was well known in the city, not only as the richest man, but as the biggest skindint imaginable. He was the sort of man who would foreclose on a widow's mortgage and turn a starving child from his door. Nevertheless, such was the prestige of Mr. Fotheringay that even his incredible meanness vanished into nothingness before the stupendous fact of his wealth.

The surgeon took his scalpel in his hand, and a low sigh of distress went up as he made an incision in the body of Mr. Fotheringay.

It seemed sacrilege. Only a man with nerves so well attuned as Professor Openhim's could have ventured upon the act. Nevertheless, once he had begun he continued just as if Mr. Fotheringay had been an ordinary patient.

Professor Openhim's hand did not tremble in the least. Nor did the anesthetist's fingers shake as he slowly and methodically let the ether drip upon the cone over Mr. Fotheringay's nose.

The operation was drawing to an end. Mr. Fotheringay had borne the shock well. He was still unconscious, and he had not stirred from first to last. Only the stertorous breathing had indicated that Mr. Fotheringay's soul still inhabited its earthly tabernacle.

One might have wondered what it was doing while Mr. Fotheringay, looking like a distressingly fat turkey, was being carved. But such speculations are sternly discouraged among physicians and surgeons, especially of Professor Openhim's eminence. The last stitches were drawn and the suturing completed. A horrid thought struck all those about the table simultaneously.

Suppose a sponge or a pair of forceps had been left in Mr. Fotheringay's wound?

They counted the sponges and the forceps eagerly. Nothing had been left behind. And in his hand the operating surgeon held the metal disk that had been taken out of Mr. Fotheringay's body.

Mr. Fotheringay was wheeled out of the operating room, through the anesthetic room into the private room that had been allotted to him. It was the most magnificent private room in the hospital. There lay Mr. Fotheringay in bed, looking a little less fat and turkey-like, and by his bedside sat a nurse, waiting for the moment when Mr. Fotheringay might decide to open his eyes.

Mr. Fotheringay had not opened his eyes, but he was speaking. "Did they find it? Did they find it?" he asked in a weak whisper.

"Yes, yes, Mr. Fotheringay," answered the nurse.

"Mr. Fotheringay stretched out his hand. "Give it to me," he muttered.

The nurse took the metal disk from the bureau and placed it in Mr. Fotheringay's hand. It was a dime.

Ellnor Glyn, the daring novelist, said at a Coronado tea:

"Youth has strange ideas. I saw a composition that a Los Angeles boy of fourteen wrote the other day on 'The Ages of Man.' The composition ran like this:

"There are three ages of man. One, When we are young we think of the sins we will commit when we grow up. This is the Age of Innocence.

"Two, When we grow up we commit these sins. This is called the Prime of Life.

"Three, When we are old we are sorry we committed them. This is our Dotage."

HERRING HEIGHTS OPPORTUNITY LOT SALE 20 Building Lots IN SUBURBS OF LANCASTER, KY., AT AUCTION ON THE PREMISES AT 2:30 P. M. Thursday, Sept. 28th

Herring Heights, that new subdivision, situated between Richmond street and the Buckeye pike, in hearing distance of the town clock. Look it over and be convinced that this is the choicest subdivision available about the city of Lancaster; excellent surroundings, grand view and drainage and the ground surface lies most suitable for building purposes.

Start now to lay the corner stone for a HOME. These lots are exclusive, yet are within the reach of any one.

TERMS EXCEEDINGLY ATTRACTIVE.

WHAT'S THAT? * THAT'S WHAT WE MEAN. THIS IS NO PUT UP AND TAKE DOWN SALE, AS WE ARE ALREADY REASONABLY ASSURED OF AN ABSOLUTE SALE OF EVERY LOT THAT WILL BE OFFERED THAT DAY.

$100.00 (AND UPWARDS) THE LOT

Not one lot to be sold that is not worth twice that for a garden spot, cheaper than cemetery lots. These lots are big enough, 50 feet wide, good depth, and all fronting a wide avenue running Eastwardly or parallel with Richmond street. City conveniences will be available. But, they are going and at $100 Each if no more is bid. In four payments: One-fourth on day of sale, one-fourth January 1st., balance in 6 and 12 months. Can you beat it? If you think so, look this subdivision over, then compare it with any other. We say it is an opportunity for any one seeking a small home in a good location through his savings account.

This sale will last but one hour, so remember the day and hour and be on hand. Any one will be shown over the plot before day of sale.

Public Sale

OF

Stock and Farm Implements

AT TEN O'CLOCK, A. M.

Wednesday, September 27th

At the farm of T. J. Underwood, on the Richmond and Lancaster Pike, between Manse and Paint Lick.

Having rented my farm, and purchased property in Lancaster where I shall move in a few days, I will sell at the high dollar, on the above date, the following personal property. One team of mules; one horse mule, 16 hands high, 6 years old; one mare mule, 15½ hands, 8 years old, fat and exceptional good qualities. One driving and saddle mare, ten years old, fat and a beauty. 26 Shropshire ewes, no better in the county, and one pure bred Shropshire ram; one Jersey heifer and some shoats. 150 bales of good timothy hay; about 50 shocks of fodder and about 12 barrels corn. One two-horse wagon; one one-horse wagon. Set of double harness; one-horse wagon harness; one Mowing Machine; one Rake; one Disk Harrow; one Section Harrow; Buggy harness; one Baggy; one one-horse Corn Drill. Several stands of bees. About 65 acres of good grass for balance of year. A lot of 2 inch iron pipe, 16 feet long. Some household furniture, and a lot of small items too numerous to mention.

This property must sell and the high dollar gets it. Terms made known on day of sale, and will be extra liberal. A good note due in six months will be taken as quickly as cash. Come whether you want to buy or not. When you see the property and hear the bids and terms, you might change your notion.

Soybeans Prove Worth To Morgan County Men

Soybeans have proved their worth to farmers in another Kentucky county, according to R. E. Stephenson, soils and crops specialist of the College of Agriculture, who recently returned from Morgan county where the beans were grown for the first time this summer. In view of the good showing which the beans have made as soil improvers and a hay crop it is probable that the acreage seeded in the county will be increased next year.

A few Morgan county farmers planted the soys in their corn for soil improvement purposes while others seeded the beans broadcast for hay. Good results were obtained in both cases. Large numbers of nodules, that contain the bacteria capable of drawing nitrogen from the air, were found on the roots of the plants indicating that a considerable amount of this valuable plant food will be added to the soils of the county by the soybeans.

Cowpeas formerly constituted the chief legume crop grown in the county, but in many cases the beans have given better results this year than the peas. Despite the fact that most of both the beans and peas were grown on good bottom land, the soys demonstrated that they were better able to withstand the drouth experiences throughout the state this year. One skeptical farmer in the county who was growing the beans and peas side by side to determine which was best suited for his land produced about 3,000 pounds of peas and 4,000 pounds of beans an acre.

Beans being grown in the same row with corn are probably giving the greatest satisfaction since farmers of the county have found that this is an economical method of supplying humus and nitrogen to improve their depleted soils. A large part of the bottom lands of the county must be seeded to corn year after year. By growing beans with the corn and sowing a cover crop in the fall to prevent erosion and leaching and to furnish a crop to plow under in the spring, the fertility of the Morgan county lands can be more effectively maintained than in any other way.

Short Measure Selling Costs Motorists $90,000,000 Year, According to Estimates of Auto Association

Washington—"Short measure" selling of gasoline was estimated recently by the National Motorists' Association to be costing purchasers $90,000,000 a year.

This figure was based on an estimate that each of ten million motorists buys two gallons of gasoline daily, and that the average filching from "short measure artists" amounts to two pints in each five gallons, resulting in a total daily loss to purchasers of one million gallons, valued at approximately $250,000.

The association announced its intention to combat the "short measure" selling.

Recent tests with "fraud detecting" devices, carefully made under official auspices by representatives of automobile clubs, the statement said, "develop the astounding fact that out of a number of purchases of gas in five-gallon lots, there was a shortage running from one to three pints each in over 50 per cent of the tests made."

These tests were conducted chiefly, it was said, in Cleveland, Louisville and Kansas City, although in one large city only or two cases of filching was reported.

Mother-To-Be, Read This—

Here is a wonderful message to all expectant mothers. When the Little One arrives, you can have that moment more free from suffering than you have perhaps imagined. An eminent physician, expert in this science, has shown the way. It was he who first produced the great remedy, "Mother's Friend." Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says: "With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse and then they had to use instruments, but with my last two children I used Mother's Friend and had only a nurse; we had no time to get a doctor because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes."

Note: Write for valuable free illustrated book, "Motherhood and the Baby," containing important authoritative information which every expectant mother should have. Send all about "Mother's Friend" to Bradford Regulator Company, B.A. 22, Atlanta, Ga. "Mother's Friend" is sold by druggists everywhere.

MANY "LICE" REMEDIES

Have Little Effect on Vermin. Tests Indicate; Use of Sodium Fluoride is Urged

Many so-called lice remedies being widely advertised throughout the country at the present time as efficient methods of ridding hens of lice and mites apparently have little if any effect upon this vermin, according to results obtained at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station in recent tests of their worth.

Four of them used on infested hens in the station poultry flock, according to the directions of their manufacturers, failed to reduce the number of parasites on the birds, according to James Holmes Martin, in charge of the station poultry work.

Inquiries from various parts of the state indicate that scores of farmers and poultrymen are being misled by the advertisements of these remedies. Questions concerning their worth also have been common at the poultry culling demonstrations being held over the state by the extension division of the College of Agriculture, the poultrymen say.

Two of the four remedies given a trial on the station farm are said by their manufacturers to be so effective that the hens have only to drink the water containing them in order to kill all lice and mites. The manufacturer of another claims that lice and mites are destroyed by the vapors of his product when a bottle of it is suspended in the coop or hen house. Still another claims that treatment with his product will render the fowls absolutely immune.

"Despite all that is claimed by these various products, sodium fluoride, which may be purchased at any drug store, has proved in trials that it is the most effective remedy known for lice and mites on poultry," Mr. Martin said. "The dip method of treating the birds is recommended during the warm days of summer."

One pound in about ten gallons of water is sufficient to treat 150 birds. In dipping the hens, they are held in one hand by their wings and completely submerged, the feathers on their body being ruffled by the free hand of the persons doing the treating while the birds are thus submerged. In cooler weather the material is applied in dry form.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR ERADICATION OF "TB"

Eastern Conference Favors Area Plan of Testing.

Leading Chicago Packers Express Intention of Paying Premium for Animals From Farms With Accredited Herds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Eastern States Tuberculosis conference, held recently at Hartford, Conn., considered various problems in the way of eradication of this plague from cattle and hogs, but the greatest emphasis was given to the area plan of testing cattle and the results that have thus far resulted from its use. The most encouraging fact brought out was that the leading Chicago packers recently expressed in a resolution their intention of paying a premium of 10 cents a hundred pounds for hogs bred and fed in and shipped from counties accredited by state and federal authorities as being free of tuberculosis and the same for those bred and fed and shipped from individual farms on which the herds have been accredited as being free of the disease.

Breeders and business men present at the conference were of the opinion that the area plan is the most economical yet devised and that it affords the maximum protection to herds against reinfection. One prominent New England breeder and milk producer said that when tuberculosis was eradicated from a herd there were much fewer complaints of losses from other causes, such as shy breeding and calf disorders.

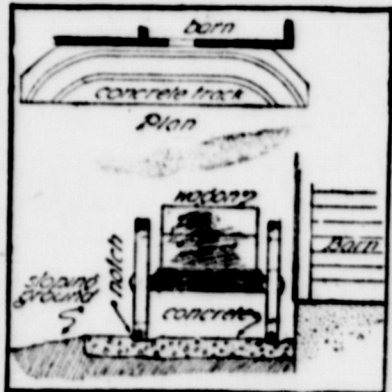

Federal and state men who are engaged in tuberculosis eradication work were unanimous in urging that there should be a "white spot", a tuberculosis-free county, in each state as soon as possible. These free areas are the best kind of demonstration to the rest of the state of the good that comes through such co-operative clean-ups and the sooner these spots are found in all parts of the country the sooner will the plague be wiped out.

This was the third conference of the kind held in this region and it is probable that another will be held next year.

DRIVE WAGON CLOSE TO CRIB

Where Sloping Land and Silo Prevented Driving in a Layer of Concrete Remedied.

Several bins built in a basement barn were hard to reach because the ground sloped away, and because a silo at one end prevented driving in close at the start. The remedy was to level the slope and put down a layer of concrete, with grooves for the wagon wheels, writes D. R. Van Horn of Nebraska, in the Farm Journal. Each groove was a little wider than the wheel and curved away from the base at the end, as shown in upper sketch. Once the wheels were started in the grooves, they were drawn in close to the barn.

BETTER LAWS AGAINST DOGS

Regulations in Various States Intended to Protect Sheep but Are Poorly Enforced.

Although 48 states have dog laws designed to protect sheep, many of them are so poorly planned or so poorly enforced that dogs still do much damage to flocks, especially in the farming states where flocks are small and dogs are plentiful. There is need for improvement in these laws, but, says the United States Department of Agriculture, a poor law that is enforced with energy may produce better results in sheep conservation than a much better law that is half-heartedly enforced. Dogs keep many men from going into the sheep business, which is probably a greater setback to the industry than the actual damage done by them.

TIME TO CUT SWEET CLOVER

If First Crop Is Harvested 12 to 14 Inches High a Good Second Crop Will Result.

If the first crop of sweet clover is cut too low the plants are killed. When cut 12 to 14 inches high a good second crop resulted. These results were secured in a trial at the North Dakota experiment station in 1916. The sweet clover sends out its second growth from the stem. The buds form in the angle between the stem and the branches. If all the branches are cut then all the buds from which new growth can come will be removed. The lower the branches come out, the lower the first crop can be cut without killing the plants.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET
FOR CONGRESS
HON. RALPH GILBERT

We're not so bad off in this country, after all.

We have strikes and suspensions of business, it is true. But we have plenty of money, plenty to eat and wear, and present indications are that we will have plenty of heat this winter. Then, too, our currency is the most valuable in the world.

In the old world they also have strikes and suspensions of business, or no business at all. And they have internal troubles, and food is scarce and prohibitive in price, and millions of them wear rags and will shiver in the cold this winter, and their currency is sadly depreciated or almost worthless.

No, not so bad. Therefore, cheer up and cheer others.

Now that the children are back in school again, what are we doing to encourage them? Or are we doing anything at all.

Possibly the children, irresponsible in their youth, do not expect anything from us, but that does not excuse us in the least.

They are entitled to our moral and spoken encouragement in their efforts to secure an education that will fit them for successful stations in life.

A few years hence they will be able to understand what we do or do not do to aid them today.

Will they consider that we did, or that we didn't?

As usual, apples have been rotting on the ground in Michigan and other states because the growers could not secure a price for them sufficient to pay the cost of marketing. At the same time consumers in the cities have been paying fancy prices or doing without.

And still, speculators blandly disclaim any thought of profiteering.

And that reminds us. Have you ever noticed how a speculating profiteer will squeeze every penny possible out of an article that he handles and then weep because there is no more blood to be sucked?

And have you noticed how that same profiteer will rage over the prices of things that he has to buy for his own use?

What kind of a duck would you call him, anyway?

If you were to see a beautiful woman walking along the street would you steal her purse? Of course not. It is absurd to even think of such an act.

And yet, when some one makes a suggestive remark about her, and some other fellow enlarges upon it and passes it along, both are committing an even greater offense. They are robbing her of her good name.

She can buy a new purse. She cannot buy another reputation.

We know a man who thinks carefully before he answers a leading question. His judgment is invariably sound.

We know of another who answers "right off the bat." His judgment is seldom accepted.

That's all—but it's a lot.

Babies often cry without knowing why they are crying. Some men cuss without really knowing why they are cussing.

The baby is a long way from being a man, but man often comes distressingly near to being a baby.

A few years ago the bicycle was all the rage, but now it is a back number. The automobile is king today, but tomorrow it may be pushed to the rear by navigation. In time, perhaps, the Lord will provide us with wings.

How often have you cussed the excessive heat of the past few months? How soon will you be cussing the cold of the bitter winter months? Aren't you just a little hard to please, anyway?

Fine, Fine, Fine!

Kiss! Kiss again! Kiss all you want to! Kiss everybody who is kissable!

For many years doctors have heartlessly told us to avoid kissing, claiming that the kiss is a spreader of disease germs. But now comes Dr. Louis Katzoff, noted physician and psychologist, who advises us to kiss to our hearts' content.

Just harken to his words of wisdom.

"Some bacteriologists," he says, "would have us carry around a jugful of carbolic acid or other germicide to wash our lips before kissing. They forget that heat is the greatest antiseptic known, and that the heat generated by a kiss destroys the supposed germ."

"Among sweethearts, kissing sends forth ethereal and hypnotic waves, traveling with great velocity, electrifying and rejuvenating every cell structure of the body, so that next to love itself it becomes the most potent agency for courage, optimism, hope, health and longevity."

Hurrah for Katzoff! He's human. Perhaps he even enjoys kissing. At any rate, he would not rob us of one of our greatest delights.

Kiss up, and keep kissing!

Too Much For Us

How much do you know? How do you know that you know it?

How did you gain your knowledge?

Most of what we are supposed to know today we learned from others, and they in their turn from still others, and so on down to the dawn of man.

In the beginning some one had to make the discovery, and others have elaborated upon it, and because their research and inventive brains were superior to ours we accept their judgment as final.

But how do we know that they were not at fault?

How do we know but what many of our supposed facts are mere fallacies?

If these few words have raised a doubt in your mind, how are you going to learn the truth?

Go to it! Your brain needs exercise, anyway.

Paying The Piper

Some men dabble in politics and are known as politicians. That is no compliment.

Others engage in constructive legislation. They are statesmen, and the term is a credit to them.

We need fewer of the former, of whom there are enormously too many.

There is a crying need of the latter, who are lamentably few.

Any novice can lay one brick on top of another, but it requires an experienced mason to construct a wall that will stand.

We are careful in the selection of the men who build the houses in which we live, but indifferent as to the calibre of those who enact the laws under which we are governed.

We pay the political piper, whether we dance or not.

Which are You, Eh?

The funny fellow attracts much temporary attention, but is soon forgotten?

The substantial man is less spectacular, but his work makes history.

Don't be too funny.

DORSET SHEEP

One of The Favorite Breeds on Dixie Stock Farm

In conversation with one of the proprietors of the Dixie Stock Farm by a representative of the Record, it naturally drifted to Dorset and Southdown sheep, which breeds are being extensively handled on these farms. In speaking of these two favorite breeds of sheep, he said:

"We have in the past few years made a specialty of pure bred sheep, and have at last settled down to the two most famous breeds in the country today, the Dorset and the Southdown. The Dorset although new to most people in Central Kentucky, is one of the most noted mutton sheep in the world and have been bred very extensively in the East for over fifty years and some fifteen or twenty years ago, crept as far West as Kentucky. In 1910 we saw the great possibilities of this breed and started our present flock."

"The demand has been greater this season for both the Dorset and Southdown, than ever before and anticipating an even greater demand next season, we have recently added another bunch of 18 to our herd."

"Our recent purchases comes from the famous and nationally known herds of The Hearts Delight Farms, of Chazy, N. Y., and the Tranquility Farms of N. J."

"In the past we have never exhibited any of our sheep, but next season we will make the circuit with a full herd of Dorset and Southdown and we intend to hold up our standard by taking out something that will bring home the bacon."

"As the Dorset is new to some in this part of the country some may ask what they are noted for, they are noted for many things, but the following are a few of their good points: They make the best cross of any sheep on any of the breeds from the mountain ewe to the Southdown; they will produce and raise more lambs than any other breed now living; produce them earlier than any of them, stand more cold weather, yield more wool, a wool that will bring more money, than any other now produced in America. The best sheep in America to clean up the filth on the farm, had rather eat a bush than blue grass, they drop their lambs in the open field in the early part of the winter and are such wonderful milkers they get them ready for the early market while they are high. Back in Dorset, Somerset, Daven and Wales they were kept for dairy purposes and were where they were developed into such good milkers and have since handed it down to their off spring until now many of them will give enough to raise three lambs. In the past eighteen months we have had one ewe to drop eight lambs and save all of them. Have one ewe that has dropped lambs three times and has dropped nine. This year we had fifty-four ewes that raised and put on the market ninety-four lambs, and were sold the 27th of June and weighed 87 pounds."

"We have one ewe that has already put two lambs on the market this year and now has two more ewe lambs that will weigh twenty-five pounds each."

"We are so strong for the Dorset sheep we are setting apart two of our farms for their production alone and no other sheep will be produced thereon, and on the other farm we will still produce the Southdown, which needs no introduction in this part of the country. In the past month we have also purchased quite a few of them for seed and hope to be able to supply a larger part of our trade the next season."

Methodist Church News
Rev. C. L. Bohon, the presiding elder of the Danville District, will preach Sunday morning. At the close of the service there will be a short quarterly conference with the officers of the church. This is the first conference of the new church year and the pastor is very desirous that there should be a full attendance at all the morning services.

Next Wednesday night the prayer and praise service will be resumed. We plan to make this hour a time of real strength and fellowship with one another and with Him. Do you find the step from Sunday to Sunday too long? Come and enjoy this service. It will be one of the best hours of the week, from 7:30 to 8:15.

The pastor and family have received many evidences of the welcome of the church. Upon coming into the parsonage they found that a great many good things had been brought to the larder and they have been coming each day since. This grocery shower is appreciated by the new comers and the spirit of welcome is very gratifying to them.

Rev. E. B. Bourland became quite ill last Saturday night and was unable to fill his pulpit on Sunday morning. He has about recovered now, and will preach next Sunday morning and evening.

The Kentucky State Convention of the Disciples of Christ will be held at Paris, beginning next Monday evening and continuing until Friday, Sept. 29th. One of the notable features of the convention, in addition to the reports and good addresses which always characterize the Kentucky convention, will be a sermon every day by R. H. Miller, minister of the Independence Boulevard Church, Kansas City. Mr. Miller is one of the outstanding ministers of the country and his sermons will greatly help any one who hear him.

The exercises on Friday, the closing day of the convention, will be held at Cane Ridge out in Bourbon county. This is the place where Barton W. Stone, one of the founders of the Disciple movement, preached and where he was preaching when he held the great Cane Ridge revival about the beginning of the Nineteenth century. Hundreds were converted at this revival and sometimes as many as 2,000 were in attendance at one time. The Paris church will conduct this celebration in an attempt to get the Disciples to make Cane Ridge a permanent memorial to Stone. This will be a feature seldom to be had at a State Convention and many will doubtless be in attendance. Several of the Lancaster Disciples are planning to go.

Mrs. Ella E. Stone has returned to Versailles from a visit with her granddaughter, Mrs. William Carson, at Lancaster.

Mrs. J. H. Clark entertained at dinner Tuesday in honor of Mrs. Dudley Lawson, of Missouri and Miss Sallie Tracy, of Illinois.

Messrs. Wesley Dickerson, James Beazley, Adolph Joseph, Will Walker, Webb Kelley and Joe Kelley left Monday for a fishing trip on the Cumberland river. They are making their headquarters at "Aunt Charity's" home.

Mrs. Lucy Spoonamore, of Hubble, Mrs. Lee Stone and Mrs. Will Stone, of Stanford and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Stone, of Washington City, were dinner guests Thursday of Mrs. Kinnaird Bourne and Mr. Bourne, of the Danville road.

Miss Allie B. Brown, of Louisville, is entertaining a house party at her home on Sherwood avenue. The guests include: Mrs. George E. Brown of Lancaster; Mrs. D. A. Hervey and children, of Paint Lick. Mrs. Cleo W. Brown, of Mt. Vernon, and Miss Edna L. Gulley, of Winnipeg, Canada.

A delightful little birthday party was given by Miss Bordina Engle at the home of her parents last Saturday evening, in which about twenty-five of her little friends participated. The hours from seven to nine were happily spent in playing games and other amusements. The home was tastily decorated for the occasion and delightful cakes and ices were served.

Mrs. J. B. Conn, of Richmond street, entertained Friday afternoon with a lovely children's party in honor of her grandsons, Master Harold Tinsley's eleventh birthday, and Briscoe Conn, Jr. The house and table were decorated in fall flowers and lighted with candles. Music and games on the lawn added to the pleasure of the children and delicious ices, cakes and bon bons were served. The little guests numbered about twenty-five.

Moore—Lee

In the Lafayette hotel, Lexington, last week occurred the marriage of Miss Mary Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Crutcher, of Georgetown, Ky., to Mr. Shirley Lee, of Palm Beach, Fla. The beautiful wedding took place in the banquet hall, which was decorated for the occasion. Dr. A. W. Fortune, of Central Christian Church, Lexington, officiating. The bride wore her mother's wedding gown and real lace and pearls, family heirlooms, and was attended by her matron of honor, flower girl and page.

The bride is a fine young woman. Her resemblance in feature and poise to the pictures of Princess Mary of England has been remarked, and in her wedding array the likeness to the royal bride must have been maintained.

While living in Washington, D. C., Mrs. Crutcher and daughter had an appreciative acquaintance with a one-time Lancaster lady, "our own" Mrs. Jennie West, of Tulsa, Okla.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee will make their home in Palm Beach, and carry the good wishes of all here who had the pleasure of knowing the bride while her parents rather temporarily lived at the William Whitley House in Lincoln county.

RETAIL DEALERS

Must be Responsible for Gasoline Tax

The following letter to county clerk, Cronley Broadus, explains gasoline tax problem, and throws the responsibility on the retail dealers:

To The County Court Clerk:— Since our recent letter to you in reference to the administration of the Gasoline Tax Law, a conference has been had with the Attorney General and representatives of the wholesale dealers of the State.

It is the opinion of this Commission that in order to successfully administer this law that its provisions in reference to requiring the retail dealers to make monthly reports of the gasoline sold to you must be strictly adhered to and enforced. We must also hold the retail dealers responsible for the payment of the tax, and if any retail dealer fails to pay the tax, or fails to have it paid for him by the wholesale dealer from whom he purchases the gasoline as his agent and representative for this purpose, he will be subject to the penalty and prosecution under the law.

Representatives of the wholesale dealers have agreed to enter into a contract and execute a bond to the Commonwealth of Kentucky for the payment of the tax upon all gasoline sold by them in the State of Kentucky monthly, as the agent and representative of the retail dealers in the respective counties. It is proper and legal for you to accept from the wholesale dealers payment by them for and on behalf of the retail dealers of your county to whom the gasoline has been sold, and if there should be any neglect or failure upon the part of the wholesale dealer to make payment of this tax for the retail dealer, the retail dealer will be liable therefore as provided by law. Therefore, if the wholesalers from whom retailers purchase gasoline report and pay the tax for the retail dealers, the Tax Commission will have no objection to such a procedure. The burden, however, will be on the retail dealer to know whether or not he is dealing with a wholesaler who is reporting and paying the tax for him. The retailer should be made to understand, however, that even where the wholesaler is reporting and paying the tax, he, the retailer, must still file with the county court clerk each month the report required by law. The reports made under the conditions laid down in this letter must be made for the month of September and for each month thereafter.

Yours very truly,
STATE TAX COMMISSION.

The Man About the House

By MYRA C. LANE

(Copyright, 1922, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Now for goodness' sake take Polly out for a walk and give me a chance to get things cleaned up," said mother.

Father smoothed back his gray hair and rose. He laid down the Sunday paper. His wife was already beginning her housework. She had taken up the rugs to shake, she was moving the furniture about the room in an aimless sort of way, and there was a worried look upon her face.

"Come along, Polly girl," said father.

He took his little daughter's hand, slapped on his hat, and they went out. The house was exactly like three dozen other houses along the street, a small, wooden structure with a tiny hall and seven rooms. There was the same strip of dragged lawn in front of each.

But in the distance were fields and hills, crowned with green. The wild country was all about them. They strode down the street together.

"Father, I don't like Sundays, because mother's always cleaning," said Polly wistfully.

"Cleaning? Oh, well, she's got to clean, I suppose," said father. He was thinking of a girl he had known before he was married, who was rather untidy, and would never have bothered about cleaning more than two or three times a year. What good times they had had together! It was strange how vividly her face came back to him after ten years of marriage.

"How'd you like us to run away," Polly asked father.

"Really?" inquired Polly, clutching his hand more tightly.

"Really, Polly. Run away somewhere where there's never any cleaning." He tried not to show his bitterness. "Just you and me, wandering along the roads, or maybe—a train whistled in the distance—"we'll take a train somewhere and never come back. We'll go and see foreign parts, where the palm trees grow, and big birds, all blue and green and yellow and red fly through the branches."

"Oh, that'll be splendid!" said Polly, clapping her hands.

"Or maybe we'll take a ship to Italy, and see all the ruins and the picture galleries. Then we'll go on to Egypt and see the desert, and the camels going by with packs of rugs on their backs. What'd you say to that?"

"Oh, wouldn't it be nice!" said Polly.

They had begun to ascend the hill behind the town. They toiled up and stood looking down. The houses seemed isolated in a vast forest.

"Maybe we'll just walk on and on till the forest's all about us. And then we'll camp in the woods and light a fire, and catch some trout and cook them for dinner. And sleep under the stars. How about that?"

"Wonderful," said Polly. "But suppose it comes out to rain, father?"

"The leaves will be so thick that not a drop of rain can come through. Besides, who cares for a little rain? Not we. Anyway, it's nicer than staying at home where there's cleaning going on, isn't it?"

"Much nicer," said Polly.

"Maybe I'm taking you too far. You're tired, dear?"

"A little bit," said Polly. "Oh, father, what a pity."

"What's a pity?"

"Did you know mother has duck and green peas for dinner?"

"Duck and green peas? What do we care for duck and green peas?"

"Nothing," said Polly, a little wistfully.

"Maybe we had better be getting back and start next Sunday instead," suggested father. "It is a little late, isn't it, Polly?"

"A little, father," answered Polly.

They started back, very slowly and wistfully, but as they neared the house they went faster and faster. Such a delicious smell came from the dining room. And there stood mother at the door.

"Well, you have been for a long walk," said mother, smiling. "And you're just in time for dinner's on the table."

They went in. The interior was as spick and span as a new pin. The odors that came from beneath the dish cover were simply indescribable.

"Duck is nice with green peas, isn't it, father?" suggested Polly.

"You mother's a pretty good cook," answered father.

Mother smiled. She knew all about the man about the house.

Scene of Much Warfare.

Since the St. Lawrence is the boundary separating Canada and the United States, it was only natural that in the wars between the French and the English, and between England and the American colonists, the Thousand Islands were the scene of important campaigns.

Some of the early struggles between the Iroquois and the Algonquins were fought in the neighborhood. In the French-English war many battles took place among the islands and on the adjoining shores. In the Revolution and in the War of 1812, the defense of the section was considered of decided importance. In the Patriots' war, with its recurrent outbreaks in 1837 and 1839, many of the more important clashes took place on this part of the river. Notable among these were the capture of the British frigate Sir Robert Peel, near Well's Island, and the battle of the Windmill, near Prescott, in 1838.

Dollar Bills

Show Best Methods of Feeding Hogs

Money literally talked to farmers who attended the recent Kentucky State Fair in showing them the wide difference in profits per acre that are obtained from different methods of fattening hogs for the market. One hundred twenty-two $1 bills, divided into four equal lots, were displayed in glass cases by the animal husbandry department of the College of Agriculture to show the relative value of different methods of hog feeding as determined in experiments conducted on the agricultural experiment station farm. Practically every farmer who passed through the grandstand building where the college exhibits were housed stopped to examine this striking display and study the wide range in profits obtained from the different methods.

Forty-eight bills were displayed in the first case which pointed out the hogging down corn and feeding tankage in a self feeder had proved to be the most profitable method of producing pork. The $48 represented the profits obtained from one acre by means of this method of feeding. The next case displayed 35 bills to show that hogging down corn and soybeans grown in the same row had not proved as profitable as the corn and tankage combination. The next case displayed an even smaller number of dollars, only 25 being exhibited in this one to show the profits obtained from an acre when corn alone was hogged down as a method of producing pork. Soybeans hogged down and supplemented with corn hand fed in amounts equal to two and one-half per cent of the total live weight of the animals presented a weak argument, as a pork producing combination. The case representing this combination contained only 14 bills to show the profits obtained from an acre by this method of feeding.

A typewritten page passed out to farmers who were interested in the exhibit showed the first combination had produced 100 pounds of pork with less cost than any of the others, the cost in this case being $4.79. One hundred pounds of pork produced by hogging down corn and soybeans cost $6.06 while every 100 pounds produced when corn alone was hogged down cost $6.44. Hogging down soybeans and hand feeding corn produced 100 pounds of pork at a cost of $10.

Wheat Yields

Are Boosted With Care on Four Points

Despite the fact that average wheat yields in Kentucky during recent years have been low, a few progressive farmers have demonstrated that yields as high as 30 or 35 bushels an acre can be obtained. Those who have obtained these profitable yields usually are farmers who give attention to about four main factors, such as seed bed preparation, fertilization, the use of good seed and proper planting dates, soils and crops specialists at the College of Agriculture say.

"One of the first things to which the successful farmer gives attention in making plans for his wheat crop is the preparation of the seed bed. Wheat demands a soil that is firm and fine. A loose soil means almost certain failure while clods contribute toward reducing yields. In cases where it is necessary to plow land for wheat, this question should be performed in ample time to allow for thorough preparation of the seed bed.

"The fertilizer most commonly used for wheat in Kentucky is acid phosphate, this material being applied with limestone and sometimes with a light application of stable manure. The best farmers use 200 pounds or more of acid phosphate an acre. On poor soils, about 300 pounds of acid phosphate with a light application of manure give good results. When clover is seeded in the wheat, better results are obtained by using limestone with the acid phosphate and manure.

"Experience has shown that farmers who get the highest yields in their communities also give considerable attention to their seed wheat, using not only clean, plump seed but also a variety that is adapted to their soils. In view of the fact that there is a wide difference in the way different varieties yield under different conditions, it is important to select a suitable variety. Many farmers prefer bearded wheat on thin, wet soils.

"Probable injury from the Hessian fly makes it important that the wheat is seeded after the recommended dates for various sections of the state. Wheat sown after October 5th, in Eastern Kentucky, October 5 to 10th, in Central Kentucky and October 10 to 14th, in Western Kentucky, is not apt to be damaged by the fly.

Making 20 Years of Racing Serve Car Owners Today

IN the early days of automobile contests, Barney Oldfield—out to win every race—studied tires. His consistent success led other drivers to ask for tires constructed to his specifications.

Twenty years of road and track victories—with a steady and increasing demand for tires as he built them—convicted Barney Oldfield that these speed tests pointed the way to a better tire for everyday use.

The enthusiastic reception of Oldfield Cords by the public proved he was right. Scores of the most prominent dealers in the country—and many thousands of car owners, experienced in the use of tires—bear witness by their decided preference that Oldfield is doing a bigger and better job of tire making.

This volume, handled in an effective way in every phase of manufacture and distribution, has resulted in price quotations far below what you'd expect on tires known to be better built and more enduring.

Practically every important race event for three years has been won on Oldfields. The Wichita Test Run in which an entire set of Oldfield Cords covered 34,525 miles on rough roads proves the mettle of the Most Trustworthy Tires Built in everyday driving.

The Master Driver and Tire Builder has given the public a new standard of tire wear and tire cost—a true economy that every car owner should know about.

Your Oldfield dealer has these facts—talk to him.

"Burke's Peerage."

"Burke's Peerage" is the name usually applied to a publication entitled "Genealogical and Heraldic Dictionary of the Peerage and Baronetage of the United Kingdom." It was first compiled in 1826 by John Burke, an Irishman of letters. It contained the names of all the British peers and baronets in alphabetical order. The publication is still issued annually and is regarded as an authority on the genealogy of leading British families.

BE READY JANUARY 1st

I am now accepting applications for loans on farm land to be closed on or before January 1st, and you should now begin to arrange your payments as it requires some time to complete farm mortgage loans.

OUR RATE IS 5 1/2 PER CENT. No red tape, just good old plain farm loans, like getting the money from your local bank, local and liberal valuations fixed. If you are now paying 6 per cent interest you are letting money get away from you that should be saved.

Just call me by phone or write to me at Paint Lick, Ky., office, Peoples Bank, and I will do the rest.

Yes, it's quite true that women's skirts are coming down. We mean they are to be made longer.

The men don't like it, and many of the women are peeved over the latest decree of fashion.

But the longer a dress is the more the dressmakers can charge for making it. Then the manufacturer who makes the goods, and the merchant who sells them, all get a crack at the customer in the increased amount of material required.

Still, there is an element of good in almost everything that comes along. Masculine eye strain will be considerably relieved. That will compensate some.

And now another thought pops out. It will hit the optical people, because there will be less demand for long distance magnifying glasses.

Shucks! It's all muddled up any way we look at it.

The only way of escape is to quit looking. But what red blooded man will voluntarily do that.

Some people imagine that the farmer is a lucky dog who lives in plenty and has nothing to do but enjoy life.

It may be true, but most farmers would be willing to trade jobs with the merchant, or the banker, or the doctor, or lawyer, or most any of the other fellows who work eight hours a day and then quit.

Farmers are leading an independent life, but they pay for all of their independence in grit, and sweat, and hard work, many more than eight hours a day.

Who is willing to trade places with any of the farmers hereabouts, prosperous and happy as they are?

Imagination carries us a long way, but it drops us back with a thud.

BURLEY GROWERS IN GOOD POSITION

Director of Warehouses Asserts Supply of Good Tobacco Outside Association Insignificant and Holdings of Pool Needed

Lexington, Ky.—On his return from West Virginia where he had been to arrange for the immediate construction and opening of receiving plants for the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, Director of Warehouses Ralph M. Barker declared that the Association growers need not worry over any danger of a necessity of holding their crops long. He said the supply of tobacco outside the Association is insignificant, as shown by market and government reports and that every pound the Association has will be needed.

Mr. Barker pointed out the fact that the Association had nearly 90 per cent of the 1922 crop signed up and that the amount that would be sold outside the Association would not exceed sixty million pounds. He said this would leave about fifteen million pounds each of tobacco available for the four leading manufacturers, and that this would not be a drop in the bucket of the needed supply. For that reason he expressed the opinion that the big manufacturers would soon take all the holdings of the Association and that they would take them even if they were larger than they will be.

Director Barker said that the situation in West Virginia and South-eastern Ohio had undergone a considerable change within the past few months, and that business men and bakers, who had been laboring under a mistaken idea of what the association proposed to do in handling tobacco, had declared for it when they understood the true nature of its operations.

"The grower who does not see fit to sell his tobacco through our co-operative has a right to a market," said Mr. Barker. And those who have joined the Co-operative also have a right to sell co-operatively. Huntington and the other towns in which we have established plants where there are loose leaf houses not in the association will have both methods of marketing tobacco.

"The amount of tobacco of the old crops not in the hands of the manufacturers is insignificant, all of it that is worthwhile being in the hands of the Burley Co-operative. With our membership increased and many of the new growers in the association, the tobacco produced outside the pool with that on hand will last a mighty short time, and it is absolutely certain that the co-operative will control the market.

"We are not worrying in the least over the situation and, personally, I wish our present holdings of tobacco were twice as large as they are. Wherever business men and bankers have had a correct understanding of the co-operative marketing idea, they have joined the farmers in backing it. We expect that to be true from now on in the untington territory.

"Business people have been courteous and have treated us with the hospitality said to be characteristic of you West Virginians. We are glad we met them and glad of the opportunity to tell them just what we propose to do in handling the tobacco of West Virginia growers. The contract under which the tobacco is signed is for five years and will be enforced to the letter, so that every grower who comes into the association will have his rights fully protected against any possible contract break-

A Versatile Fruit.

In Forecast we read of a New York sportsman who was spending his annual vacation in the Moosehead country and who had engaged the services of an old French Canadian as his guide. The sportsman liked to ask the old man questions about the different objects that attracted his attention. Happening to notice a clump of cranberry vines on the shore of a lake, he asked the old man what they were and whether they were good to eat. "Good to eat? Well, I should say so. You take that little cranberry and stew him, she makes just as good apple sauce as prunes."

The principle of the vacuum cleaner is being applied to unload coal, handle grain and other products in large quantities.

Painter's Secret.

Use wood alcohol to remove old paint or varnish when about to redecorate furniture. Apply with soft brush, and after a few minutes rub off with old cloths. If paint is very thick and dry more time must be given to "soak," and a putty knife may be needed to remove the worst of the old paint. This will remove old finish exactly as well as the prepared varnish removers, at much less cost. Be careful not to inhale the alcohol, nor get it in the eyes when using.

Animal Mimicry.

Observers of nature are frequently struck with the singular resemblances of insects to leaves, dried sticks and so forth, and these likenesses are supposed to have grown out of the necessity of protection against or concealment from enemies. An interesting example of this kind of resemblance was recently cited by a government naturalist, who exhibited a spider found inhabiting some rocks near Cannes, on which were also fastened the cases of a species of moth. When at rest the spider exhibited almost precisely the same form and color as the moth cases surrounding it.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF SPRING LITTERS AS COMPARED WITH 1921

Swine Judging at a State Fair—Displays of Well-Bred Animals Competing for Honors Have an Important Influence in Improving Live Stock Industry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A net increase of 14.5 per cent in the number of young pigs produced this spring in the Corn Belt states is shown in a special pig survey just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture. This increase may overcome the present shortage of meat stocks, the department states.

The survey shows a gross increase of 22.8 per cent in the number of spring litters this year as compared with the number of litters born last spring, but the average number of pigs saved per litter is 7 per cent less than last spring. The April 1 brood sow report of the department indicated a net increase of 15.6 per cent in pig production this spring over last year.

The department points out that stocks of pork products other than lard in storage May 1 are 33 per cent less than the five-year average and 26 per cent less than a year ago. Lard stocks May 1 were 16 per cent less than the five-year average and 37 per cent less than on May 1, 1921. Stocks of other meats are correspondingly low.

It is also pointed out that the survey covers numbers of hogs and not weight. The records show that the average weight of hogs marketed has varied as much as 34 per cent, or from 193 to 262 pounds, during the past five years. Many producers have found it profitable to market their hogs early at light weight before the usual run of heavy hogs later, the department says.

If farmers carry out their expressed intentions with respect to breeding for fall farrowings the total number of sows expected to farrow for the year, including spring and fall farrowings, will be 28 per cent larger than last year.

The survey indicates a prospective increase of 49 per cent in the fall farrowings in these states over last year. Last year fall farrowings represented 28 per cent of the total farrowings for the year, while this year they will probably represent 35 per cent. If the number of pigs saved per litter is as low as this spring, however, the prospective increase in number of pigs next fall will be materially reduced. The average number of pigs saved per litter, as reported for this spring, is 5.66 pigs, compared with 4.1 pigs last spring and 5.9 pigs last fall.

Smaller increases in East and South. The survey in Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland shows an increase of only 5 per cent in the number of litters for the first half of the year, while the total number of pigs saved shows a decrease of 5 per cent from a year ago. The number of sows bred for fall farrowing shows an increase of 23 per cent over the number of sows which farrowed last fall. A total increase of 14 per cent in the number of litters for the year is indicated provided the intentions of farmers to produce fall pigs are carried out.

In the Southern states, including Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, an increase of 5 per cent in the number of spring litters is reported, but the total number of pigs saved is the same as last year on account of the smaller number of pigs saved per litter. These Southern states show an increase of 27 per cent in the number of sows intended to be bred for fall farrowing over last year, with a total prospective increase of 11 per cent in the number of litters for the year.

The survey is based upon about 200,000 schedules received from farmers in the Corn Belt states, which produce about 70 per cent of the pigs in the United States, and from farmers in the eastern and southern states. The schedules were distributed by rural mail carriers to 15 farmers on each rural mail delivery route. It is planned to make a similar survey in about six months which will be used as a check on the department's estimate, and also indicate the number of pigs to be produced in the spring of 1923. The figures in the present survey are given below.

STORE AWAY CANVAS COVERS WHEN DRIED

Liable to More or Less Damage Through Moisture.

Heavy Pieces Should Be Stretched Over Beam or Large Horizontal Pole—Will Last Much Longer if Waterproofed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Canvas and duck wagon and crop covers and canvas bags are liable to damage through moisture, causing subsequent mildew or rotting unless they are dried before being stored, says the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture. Canvas which has become wet or even damp should be dried as soon as possible by being spread over a wagon or hung over a fence or large pole until it is thoroughly dry. If the weather is wet, it may be hung under a shed or in the barn. No canvas bags, etc., should be folded or stored while damp.

Folding of a heavy canvas, especially if it has been stiffened by a waterproofing treatment or by being wet or frozen, may weaken or crack the fabric, causing it to leak. For this reason, heavy canvas when not in use should hang over a beam or large horizontal pole, or should be suspended against the inside of a barn or shed rather than folded. Canvas and duck will give better service and last longer if waterproofed. The United States Department of Agriculture, in Farmers' Bulletin 1157, gives full directions for waterproofing and mildew-proofing cotton duck. The bulletin may be had free on application.

PRODUCING CERTIFIED SEED

Many Potato Growers Will Be Disappointed Because of Rise in Requirements.

Probably as a result of the better price received last year for certified seed stock, Maine potato growers this year have listed more than 3,300 acres for inspection of representatives of the State Department of Agriculture. Many of these growers will be disappointed, however, because they have started with stock of no particular merit. Over a series of years an average of 47 per cent of the entries passed the seed-certification requirements, but this year the percentage will probably be lower. The mosaic standard has been raised. This year a field having as much as 5 per cent of mosaic disease is disqualified for producing certified seed. The best stock grown now is that from strains imported from the Canadian provinces within the last few years.

MANSE

School tablets. A. H. Bastin & Co.
Rev. W. A. Ramsey spent last week in Louisville.

Miss Faye Ward spent Saturday at Harrodsburg.

Miss Kate Wells was a welcome visitor at Manse last Sunday.

Misses Callie Reid and Anne Higgins were in Danville last Saturday.

Supt. J. R. Abner visited Manse school last week and gave a very helpful talk to the pupils.

The girls Basket Ball team will be glad to schedule a game with any other school team in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tudor and family, attended the dedication of the New Union church at Berea last Sunday.

The Manse Boy's Basket Ball team will meet with Buena Vista team for a match game on Sept. 22nd., at Buena Vista.

The Manse Graded and High school is doing splendid work and a record of 100 per cent attendance is being maintained each day.

Those taking county examinations at Manse on last Friday were Misses Thelma Tudor, Flora Cotrell, Faye Green and Clyde Wooten.

Rev. C. A. VanWinkle brought his mowing machine to the school house and did some practical "Parent-Teacher's Association work" by mowing off the grounds. The teachers of the school have an association that they are very proud of and a community that is rarely found.

The teachers of the Manse school have arranged for a traveling library to be sent from Frankfort Library, which will consist of books on farming, machinery and many other subjects of interest to the community. A librarian from the Parent-Teacher's Association will have charge of the books and loan them to the community. This library may be kept for six months or longer.

Fault of Pacific Ocean.

As far as the extent of the Pacific goes, its immensity is a drawback to its commerce. If it were half as wide it would carry a much heavier tonnage. If its shores were half as far apart the nations that face its great expanse would be more neighborly and would trade more extensively among themselves. Freight would be lower and passenger fares would cost less.
